ORDER

The matter was elaborately heard, and judgment was reserved on 02.09.2025. While going through the written submissions, we found that certain aspects, which were not urged during the course of oral submissions, were detailed in the written submissions.

We have made it amply clear, on several occasions both in this appeal and even otherwise, that written submissions can only be filed to supplement the oral submissions made earlier and not to put-forth submissions which were not argued during the course of oral hearing. Since these aspects find place for the first time, in the written submissions now filed, we deem it appropriate to re-open the matter and hear learned counsel on these aspects also. A copy of that part of the written submissions filed by the Appellant which, in our view, were not part of the oral submissions made earlier, have been made available to Learned Counsel on both sides to enable them, if they so choose, to put-forth their oral submissions on these aspects. With a view to avoid a repetition of what transpired earlier, we make it clear that Additional Written Submissions, if any, shall be filed and placed on record before oral submissions are put-forth on the afore-said appeal.

Post the matter for further hearing on 27.10.2025.
